Secretary Replies to Chamberlain That He Is Willing to Let People Pass on Controversy.

NO HELP EVER RECEIVED

War Chief Declares Oregon Senator Never Gave Aid—Court Martial Revision Will Be Made, He Says.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Commenting on what he termed "the very intemperate speech" of Senator Chamberlain, retiring chairman of the senate military committee, delivered at Natchez, Miss., in connection with the Ansell-Crowder court-martial controversy, Secretary Baker said today that in three years as secretary of war he could not recall a single instance in which he had received a helpful suggestion from Senator Chamberlain or one which seemed intended to be helpful.

"I am perfectly willing," the secretary added, "to let the people of the country decide between what the war department has done in three years, and what Senator Chamberlain has said in three years."

Discussion of the controversy involved Col. Samuel T. Ansell, formerly acting judge advocate general, and Judge Advocate General Crowder and their respective views of the necessity for revising the army's system of justice, was revived today by Senator Chamberlain's speech and by the publication in a New York newspaper of the letter of Colonel Ansell to Secretary Baker to make public the secret he recently refused to make public on the ground that it would not be helpful.

As to the appearance of the letter, Mr. Baker said that the "swell" of abuse, accusation and violent language about personal differences between officers can only be properly inquired into through the regularly established agents of the army." He would make no comment on the personal phase of the controversy, pending the report of the inspector general, who is now making an official investigation.

The important part of this matter," Mr. Baker continued, "is the question of military justice. Upon that subject the committee and the American Bar association and various other agencies are at work. I am very anxious to have every detail of the system discovered and corrected."
